What is the European Day of Languages?

The European Day of Languages was first set up by the European Council in 2001. Now, it takes place every year on 26th September.

It celebrates and promotes language learning and linguistic diversity.

Why learn languages?

Being able to speak different languages can help you to:

make new friends;

travel and study abroad;

live and find work in different countries;

understand different cultures.

What happens on the European Day of Languages?

There are events and celebrations taking place across many countries in Europe.

Activities include fairs, conferences, school events, workshops and language taster sessions.
